Dating is different under COVID-19

You are in control of your own decisions.

That's why it's so important to wear a mask, wash your hands frequently, and avoid large crowds. Limit your social circle to your roommates, your household, or just a few friends who practice healthy behaviors and good hygiene.

Meeting people and dating are not the same in the age of COVID-19. Taking precautions for intimate and sexual activities is always the right thing to do, and since COVID-19 can be sexually transmitted, staying safe from the Coronavirus adds an additional consideration for being a responsible partner.

Have open and honest conversations with your partner about sexual health and decisions about touching, kissing, intercourse, and alternatives. If you test positive, follow all safety protocols, and make agreements with your partner to restrict exposure. You can still have a healthy and fulfilling relationship.
